

Home.

Home is not dissimilar to a swaying tree adorned by colourful ribbons: cherished memories of our childhood,

Home could be a treehouse in the rainforest or a stilted log cabin made of wood,

Home is like no other place on earth, it is a sacred place embellished with the reminiscence of our unique pasts,

Home is not just the building in which we dwell for most of our years, but it is the feeling of warmth and recollections of comfort, that lasts,

Home is a place, where we feel the pull of our emotions, the warmth and affection; home can be wherever it is chosen to be; home is different for every individual.

Isabella Garcia, Aged 12, Amery Hill School