

Changes in Living Memory

Time and Toys

A great introduction to history for children

Your class take on the role of being History detectives creating a toy timeline to see how things have changed from out of living memory, to in living memory but older to today. They can explore old and new through handling artefacts from our toy collection, play traditional games, investigate push and pulls, and make their own toy to take home.

1950s House

When Great Grandma was a girl

Explore the 1950s house and discover how things have changed. Children can have a go at doing the washing without a machine, get all dressed up 1950s style, lay the tea table for a traditional tea, visit the old corner shop, and celebrate a birthday as you would have been done in the past.
