FAMILY TIES

Jane's father, George Austen, (1731–1805) was the rector of St Nicholas Church in the parish of Steventon. Reverend Austen took in boys to tutor.

His wife Cassandra (née Leigh) (1739–1827) was a sociable, witty woman whom George had met while studying in Oxford. Cassandra was visiting her uncle, Theophilus Leigh, Master of Balliol College. When Cassandra left the city, George followed her to Bath and continued to court her until they got married on 26 April 1764, at the church of St Swithin in Bath.

Although a close knit family, by today's standards the household was subject to somewhat fluid arrangements regarding the care of offspring. As was customary for the gentry at the time, Jane's parents sent her as an infant to be cared for by a farming neighbour, Elizabeth Littlewood.

Her brother George, who is thought to have suffered from epilepsy, also lived away from the family home. And the third child, Edward (shown left), was adopted by his father's third cousin, Mr Thomas Knight, eventually inheriting Godmersham and Chawton House, which led him to offer a cottage attached to the Chawton estate to his mother and two sisters, Jane and Cassandra.

Arrangements like these were normal for the time - the family was close and affectionate and recurring themes of family bonds and respectable rural living would play a strong part in Jane's writing.

THE AUSTEN FAMILY – WHAT TO SEE

The most extensive collection of memorabilia relating to the Austen family is showcased at Jane Austen's House, Chawton. See overleaf to find out more...

STEVENTON & BEYOND

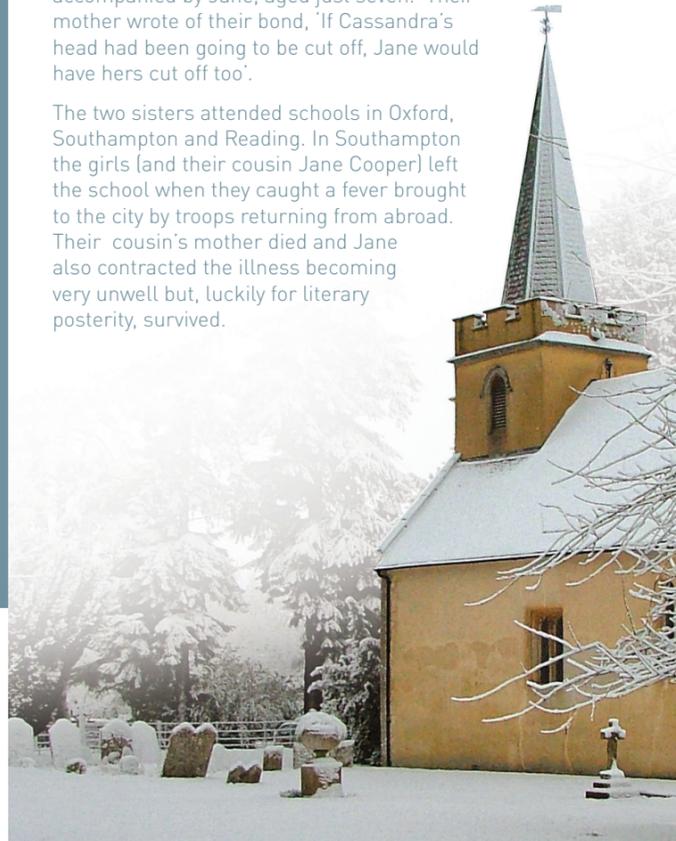

EDUCATION AND EARLY INFLUENCES

Jane Austen was born on 16 December 1775 at Steventon Rectory in north Hampshire, where her parents had moved a year previously with three of Jane's older siblings. Henry was born before Jane, then a further three siblings arrived, meaning that the Austen brood numbered eight in all.

George Austen, known as 'the handsome proctor' at Balliol College, was a reflective, literary man, who took pride in his children's education.

Most unusually for the period, he owned more than 500 books and was forward thinking in encouraging his daughters to read widely. Again unusually, when Jane's only sister, Cassandra, left for school in 1782, she was accompanied by Jane, aged just seven. Their mother wrote of their bond, 'If Cassandra's head had been going to be cut off, Jane would have hers cut off too'.

The two sisters attended schools in Oxford, Southampton and Reading. In Southampton the girls (and their cousin Jane Cooper) left the school when they caught a fever brought to the city by troops returning from abroad. Their cousin's mother died and Jane also contracted the illness becoming very unwell but, luckily for literary posterity, survived.

The girls' brief schooling was finally curtailed due to constraints upon the family's finances and Jane returned to the rectory in 1787 to begin writing a collection of poems, plays and short stories which she dedicated to friends and family. This, her Juvenilia, encompassed her early writings.

Pages from A History of England, perhaps the most celebrated of these early works, can be viewed online at the British Library website (www.bl.uk/onlinegallery). Even in this, one of Austen's earliest texts, the reader glimpses the wit that was to come. The prose is peppered with phrases illustrating her flair for detached, literary anticlimax:

'Lord Cobham was burnt alive, but I forget what for.'

STEVENTON WHAT TO SEE

Other than a towering lime tree, offspring of one planted by Jane's brother James, and a clump of nettles that is thought to mark the spot where the family well used to stand, nothing remains at the site of the rectory other than the rural tranquillity that was perhaps as central an element of Austen's creativity as the society of her day.

At St Nicholas Church there is a bronze plaque dedicated to the writer and you can see her elder brother's grave, along with those of other relatives.

The 1000-year old yew, which used to house the key in the time of the Austens, still yields berries – its secret, central hollow intact.

The Wheatsheaf Inn in North Waltham was once a coaching inn and posting house visited by Austen as a child. Today it serves food to passers by. Offering open fires and cosy seating, many of the building's 18th century features are still intact.

THE DANCING YEARS

Coming from a respectable family associated with the church, Jane and her sister Cassandra occupied a social stratum bracketed as gentry.

The well-spoken girls enjoyed a busy round of dances and house visits, mingling with the higher echelons of local Georgian society in the great houses dotted throughout the rolling green countryside.

As well as spending time with the family friend Madam Lefroy, who lived at Ashe Rectory, we know that Jane and Cassandra came into contact with the infamous Boltons of Hackwood Park. (Jane dryly comments after meeting the illegitimate daughter of Lord Bolton in the Bath assembly rooms that she was 'much improved with a wig'); She also visited the Hansons of Farleigh House; and the Dorchesters of Kempshott Park where Jane attended a New Year's ball in 1800.

Jane Austen's keen observation of the manners and morals of her extended social network was to give rise to her famous plotlines revolving around unsuitable suitors and social position – she started drafting Pride and Prejudice, Sense and Sensibility and Northanger Abbey whilst living at the rectory.

DID YOU KNOW?

Joe Wright's 2005 adaptation of Pride and Prejudice starring Keira Knightly (see right and overleaf) has scenes that were shot in Winchester.

'Give a girl an education and introduce her properly into the world, and ten to one but she has the means of settling well.'

Landmarks of the author's life in Hampshire

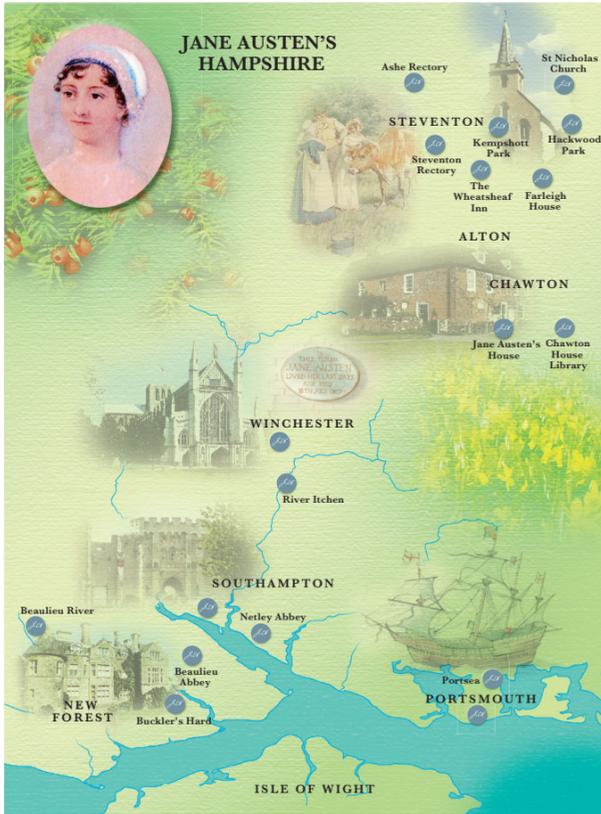

On 18 July 1817 Jane Austen died in a house on College Street in Winchester after a short illness. To mark the bicentenary of her death, Hampshire Cultural Trust is bringing together a programme of events across the county that inspired so much of her writing. As her final resting place, Winchester Cathedral is a central landmark of her life.

This trail traces her journey from birth to her death giving you an insight into the life and times of this 'Hampshire girl.'

SISTERLY LOVE

It was Jane's older sister, Cassandra, who sketched the only first hand likeness of the author – shown on the upper left of the map above. The tiny portrait, painted in 1810, bears lasting witness to the description of her by Sir Egerton Brydges who had visited Steventon: 'Her hair was dark brown and curled naturally, her large dark eyes were widely opened and expressive. She had clear brown skin and blushed so brightly and so readily.'

WINCHESTER
HER FINAL RESTING PLACE

On 24 May 1817, Jane and her sister Cassandra drove the 16 miles from Chawton to Winchester to be closer to the doctor who would treat her unknown illness. From 8 College Street Austen wrote to her nephew, 'our lodgings are very comfortable. We have a neat little Drawing-Room with a bow window overlooking Dr. Gabell's garden.'

She continued to write – pencilling the short poem Winchester at the Races to honour St Swithun. Sadly Jane's illness, thought today to be Addison's Disease, could not be cured and at 4am on Friday 18 July she died with her head resting on her sister's knee.

The College Street residence is now a private house but Winchester's tourist guides link all the Austen landmarks in the city together in their fascinating tour, and informative cathedral tours are also available.

Jane Austen was buried in the north nave aisle of Winchester Cathedral on 24 July 1817. Cassandra wrote to her niece: 'Her dear remains are to be deposited in the cathedral... a Building she admired so much'.

After her death the number of people who appreciated Austen's work steadily grew and in 1870 her nephew Edward wrote a memoir of his aunt and used the proceeds to erect a brass plaque beginning 'Jane Austen, known to many by her writings'. In 1900 she was famous enough for a public subscription to pay for a memorial window. Today an exhibition detailing Jane's life in Hampshire is situated beside her grave.

It is recommended for those making a special visit to Winchester Cathedral to visit winchester-cathedral.org.uk for opening times.

RAIN JANE makes a splash for the bicentenary

If you are in Winchester on a rainy day at the end of 2016, why not try to find the 12 Jane Austen quotes that will, for a short period, appear on the wet pavements of the city? A temporary installation will be sited in the College Street garden opposite the house where the author died.

The temporary trail was devised to raise local awareness that Austen was a 'Hampshire girl' prior to the commemorative events programme in 2017.

Winchester City Council's Visit Winchester team would like to thank the following individuals and organisations for their help in producing this leaflet: Elizabeth Proudman, Official Winchester Tourist Guide and Chair of the Jane Austen Society for her knowledge and input; Louise West and the team at Jane Austen's House Museum, Chawton for their guidance and the images of her family featured in the Family ties section of this leaflet; Dr John Crook for the image of Jane Austen's ledger stone and the house in College Street featured in the Winchester section of this leaflet; Revd. Michael Kenning, rector of Steventon Church for his help and advice throughout all stages of this project; Phil Howe at Hidden Britain Tours for his invaluable advice at the outset of the project; www.mollands.net for their kind permission to use featured illustrations from their online Austen archive; BBC Photo Library and Universal Pictures for their co-operation regarding the use of stills from two adaptations of Pride and Prejudice; Winchester Cathedral and Hampshire Cultural Trust for their support and information within the leaflet.

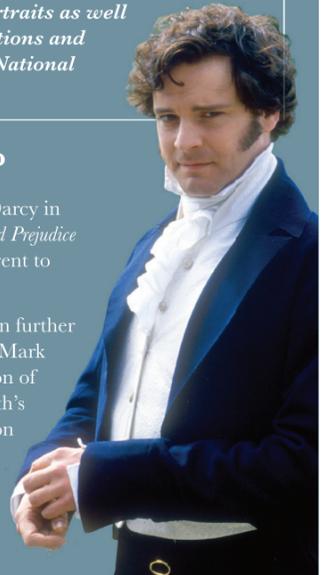

Visit Winchester

In 2017 the Gallery in Winchester Discovery Centre will be hosting a world class exhibition: Jane Austen 200 – The Mysterious Miss Austen. Exploring Jane's life and work and her relationship to Hampshire, the exhibition will include the pelisse coat which is the only garment in the world with provenance that can be traced back to the author. It will also include first editions of her work, personal letters and portraits as well as loans from national institutions and private lenders including the National Portrait Gallery.

DID YOU KNOW?

Colin Firth whose portrayal of Mr Darcy in the 1995 BBC adaptation of Pride and Prejudice brought him widespread attention, went to school in Winchester.

His performance in the role was given further renown when he took on the role of Mark Darcy in the Miramax film adaptation of Bridget Jones Diary – meaning that Firth's casting lent an ironic, modern twist on the persona of the Austen anti-hero who came good.

'Our Chawton home how much we find already in it to our mind, and how convinced that when complete it will all other houses beat.'
JANE AUSTEN, 1809

JANE AUSTEN'S HOUSE MUSEUM

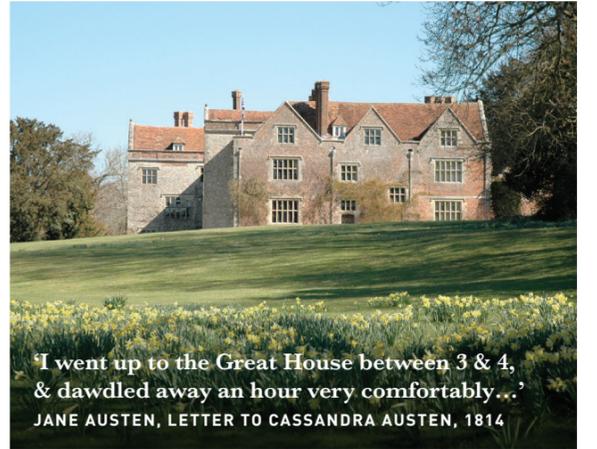

From 1809 until 1817 Jane lived in Chawton village near Alton with her mother, sister and their friend Martha Lloyd. Restored to the rural Hampshire she loved, Jane turned again to writing and it was here that she produced her greatest works, revising all previous drafts and writing Mansfield Park, Emma and Persuasion in their entirety.

Remarkably, even now the approach to Chawton is not so changed by progress as to be unrecognisable from what it was in Jane Austen's day, with thatched cottages remaining. The risk of flooding was a fact of life in eighteenth century Hampshire too, as Jane bemoans in March 1816: 'Our pond is brim full and our roads are dirty and our walls are damp, and we sit wishing every bad day may be the last.'

A museum to Jane's life, the house in which Jane lived so happily now showcases Austen family portraits and touching memorabilia such as the handkerchief she embroidered for her sister, original manuscripts and a bookcase containing first editions of her novels.

Visitors can stand behind the modest occasional table at which Austen wrote, to admire the peaceful garden cultivated to feature 18th century plants. Although there were adequate bedrooms for the sisters to have their own rooms, Jane and Cassandra chose to share a room, as they had done at Steventon. Jane rose early, practised the piano and made breakfast. We know that she was personally in charge of the sugar, tea and wine stores.

'I went up to the Great House between 3 & 4, & dawdled away an hour very comfortably...'
JANE AUSTEN, LETTER TO CASSANDRA AUSTEN, 1814

CHAWTON HOUSE LIBRARY

Visitors can walk in Jane's footsteps up to her brother Edward's house, regularly visited by Jane and referred to as 'the Great House' in her letters. This Elizabethan manor house is now home to Chawton House Library, a registered charity with a unique collection of women's writing (1600–1830).

The house is open to visitors who can see Jane's brother Edward's portrait and travel journal, along with the Knight family dining table at which Jane regularly dined with her family. The peaceful gardens include many of the period features referred to in Jane Austen's novels, such as a shrubbery, a 'ha-ha' and a 'wilderness', along with a Walled Garden built by Edward Austen. Among the Library collection is a manuscript of a family theatrical in Jane Austen's own hand, along with some of her first editions, and works by other women writers of her time, and earlier.

Scandal in The White Hart

Jane and her sister wrote of a scandal that occurred in Winchester in 1808. A Southampton Colonel's wife, Laetitia Powlett, was discovered in The White Hart with the notorious Lord Sackville. A successful case for damages was launched by the Colonel and the couple were divorced following proceedings in Winchester Diocese Consistory Court in 1809.
